

Bio for Karen Moorman

Karen has been a faculty member here at PGCC since 1995. She graduated from Prince George's Community College with an Associate's Degree in Radiography, and obtained her Bachelor's Degree in Health Care Administration from Columbia Union College. She has previously taught radiography courses at Washington Adventist School of Radiography. She has worked as a radiographer, CT technologist, interventional technologist, quality assurance technologist, sonographer, mammographer, and has worked with a portable imaging company.

She currently teaches the following courses in the Radiography program: Patient Care and Management; Procedures I, II, and IV. She is the Clinical Coordinator for the program and is involved with student clinical site scheduling. Karen also provides instruction in some of the program's clinical settings.

Karen has been practicing in the field of radiography since 1974 and is an active member in her professional societies. She likes to share her many years of experience by presenting lectures for those organizations.

When not working for the college, Karen likes to spend time with her husband, her dog, and her three grandchildren. She enjoys cruising, reading, and gardening.
